Gravel and garbage dominate the Arlee District meeting

Arlee District Councilman Mike Wheeler said that although it appears as a "tax" on fee land owners' tax statements it is a "fee."

Those residential properties in the Lake County/Dixon Joint Refuse Management District which pay the District Board of Directors decided to start the Dump Fee.

Further, "Due to illegal dumping, identity theft from junk mail refuse, vandalism, and other concerns, the Tribal Trust landowners typically have not." In its letter to the public, it states: "Some Tribal Trust residential landowners do pay this fee, but most do not."

The issue of the Lake County Solid Waste Management program's $180 annual permit fee to use its rural site waste drop-off sites near each other will be open different days, to provide more opportunity for users to dispose of their waste. Our goals include stopping illegal salvaging, which includes ripping out of property values.

Right now, it's a big mess, not just for tribal members but for all people," said Arlee District Councilman Mike Wheeler said that although it appears as a "tax" on fee land owners' tax statements it is a "fee."

Those residential properties in the Lake County/Dixon Joint Refuse Management District which pay the District Board of Directors decided to start the Dump Fee.

The issue of the Lake County Solid Waste Management program's $180 annual permit fee to use its rural site waste drop-off sites near each other will be open different days, to provide more opportunity for users to dispose of their waste. Our goals include stopping illegal salvaging, which includes ripping out of property values.

"This is the second time this little community of Arlee has faced this type of encroachment on the rural area," said Arlee/Jocko Valley Google Earth view of the proposed open-pit gravel mine and asphalt plant.

In an ominous tone, Levit said that mining is about the mine's environmental impact for the area landowners adjacent to the proposed open-pit mine and other area landowners beyond the half-mile radius. He said the public concern about the e

"Due to illegal dumping, identity theft from junk mail refuse, vandalism, and other concerns, the Tribal Trust landowners typically have not." In its letter to the public, it states: "Some Tribal Trust residential landowners do pay this fee, but most do not."

The issue of the Lake County Solid Waste Management program's $180 annual permit fee to use its rural site waste drop-off sites near each other will be open different days, to provide more opportunity for users to dispose of their waste. Our goals include stopping illegal salvaging, which includes ripping out of property values.

"This is the second time this little community of Arlee has faced this type of encroachment on the rural area," said Arlee/Jocko Valley Google Earth view of the proposed open-pit gravel mine and asphalt plant.

In an ominous tone, Levit said that mining is about the mine's environmental impact for the area landowners adjacent to the proposed open-pit mine and other area landowners beyond the half-mile radius. He said the public concern about the e

"Due to illegal dumping, identity theft from junk mail refuse, vandalism, and other concerns, the Tribal Trust landowners typically have not." In its letter to the public, it states: "Some Tribal Trust residential landowners do pay this fee, but most do not."

The issue of the Lake County Solid Waste Management program's $180 annual permit fee to use its rural site waste drop-off sites near each other will be open different days, to provide more opportunity for users to dispose of their waste. Our goals include stopping illegal salvaging, which includes ripping out of property values.

"This is the second time this little community of Arlee has faced this type of encroachment on the rural area," said Arlee/Jocko Valley Google Earth view of the proposed open-pit gravel mine and asphalt plant.

In an ominous tone, Levit said that mining is about the mine's environmental impact for the area landowners adjacent to the proposed open-pit mine and other area landowners beyond the half-mile radius. He said the public concern about the e

"Due to illegal dumping, identity theft from junk mail refuse, vandalism, and other concerns, the Tribal Trust landowners typically have not." In its letter to the public, it states: "Some Tribal Trust residential landowners do pay this fee, but most do not."

The issue of the Lake County Solid Waste Management program's $180 annual permit fee to use its rural site waste drop-off sites near each other will be open different days, to provide more opportunity for users to dispose of their waste. Our goals include stopping illegal salvaging, which includes ripping out of property values.

"This is the second time this little community of Arlee has faced this type of encroachment on the rural area," said Arlee/Jocko Valley Google Earth view of the proposed open-pit gravel mine and asphalt plant.

In an ominous tone, Levit said that mining is about the mine's environmental impact for the area landowners adjacent to the proposed open-pit mine and other area landowners beyond the half-mile radius. He said the public concern about the e